opened the eyes of the authorities at Peking to the fact that they were being cheated out of a large revenue. The returns ed freely to bond their goods under reasonfrom foreign opium were decreasing owing to the competition of the native drug, and from the native article they obtained next to no revenue, whatever taxes were collected thereon never getting beyond the pockets of the provincial mandarina. In order therefore to prevent the revenue of the country from suffering, it was necessary, seeing that native opium was steadily ousting the foreign article, to get the control of the taxes levied on the former. The action taken by the Government to secure that end was doubtless rendered all the more energetic by the dissome of the protectionlet countries in Edsatrap and his minions are called to book, ppium trade, the circular recently issued Curwann Bound :- Coronandel Gieneagles; ment. If merchants are allowable conditions they will be positive gainers, and our Trade as a whole may reasonably be expected to expand by the removal of the fetters that new hamper it. On the other hand, the Chinese will have a considerable addition to the revenue and they will have been brought one step nearer what must come sconer or later, the entire abolition of inland taxation. The entire abolition of inland larstlon may be still in the distant future, and it will doubtless always be necessary to take some revenue on such articles as native opium-articles that take the place of the spirits and tobacco of western lands. But if once foreign goods were allowed to break through the barriers, a breach would be made which would hasten their total destruction. We can only hope that as means of communication are improved, as milways are introduced, it will be found not only impossible but impracticable to maintain these innumerable tolls which now strangle trade. The abolition of inland tolls in Europe, it must be remembered, is only the work of the present century. It will take some time to convince Ohina of the great gain, alle would make, and perhars the strong tat reraussive power will lie in the from horse, which has been one of the greatest instruments in breaking down toll-houses in Kurope. Even should the import daty have to be doubled, there would be an addoubted gain to trade, if the removal of the irregular inland toxes was secured . The Oustoma duty levied in China, it must not beforgotten, is little more than 41 per cent. ad valorem which compares very favourably with the enormous duties levied by

THE Chung-ngoi-san-pu had an article last Wednesday on the Chinese Member in the Legislative Council. The writer shows his ignorance of European affairs by stating at the outset that members of the House of Commons may be foreigners. He has heard, however, that laws are passed there by the vote of the majority. And of course that must be the case in Hongkong too. Now, it is certainly a most just and proper Parliament, when 80 or 90 per cent. of the population are Chinese. But why limit, he says, the number to one? OHINA. Some interesting and useful information as to the use of paper money in China is given in the answers of correspondents from various parts of the Empire to the questions of the China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society with reference to the Currency. We find that in the four northern provinces, Sheng-king, Chihli, Shangtung, and Shansi, cash notes are in common uso. but the use of notes for allver, as distinguished from cheques, does not appear to be extensive. In Shang-king the amount of cash notes in circulation is estimated at 8,000,000 tracs or 300,000 tacks, and they are cheerfully accepted both because of their convenience and of the immunity from loss thereon owing to debased cash. In Peking and Tientsin cash notes are in common use to-day, though we know that bank notes were in very much larger use before American silver began to reach China in the form of dollars, which in many places have superseded bank notes of al kinds. In Shantung we find cash notes free circulation within a radius of 100 ! from Chi nan-fu; and readily accepted by shop-keepers and salt-dealers. Cash notes IMPORT OF SILVER AND COPPER value from 570 to 5,000 cast are used in Shansi, but silver notes are not in cirweighing each the same quantity of eilver notes of values varying from 500 to 1000 are money. It is the large extent of the cash are extensively used, and spurious notes commercial area of China that has hitherto are affoat in such quantities that the moneyprevented the adoption of a national coin. | changers have to be unusually cautions in age. Local rules of trade are fixed by changing paper money for cash. In Hancommercial guilds; and guilds in different | Chungfu there is a very curious and serprovinces take divergent views. There has | viceable bank note made of oil-cloth in use, been a good deal of caprice in the adoption | which, however, we fear must soon become of certain dollars. Certain guilds formerly as disagreeable as a Russian paper rouble favoured the old Spanish dollars. Others in a Siberian town. No official control is have favoured Mexicans and others chop- exercised over the issue of paper money in ped dollars. Each Viceroy and Governor Shensi or Kansu, and panics sometimes ochas the assistance of a Treasurer; and each cur, generally owing to one dishonest bank-Viceroy and Tressurer is a new man from er closing his doors which causes a rush upis appointed in Peking on account of money. Three large banks in Kansu issue favourable influences which are there par- silver drafts. In Wenchow and Ningpo the amount at the time. The Treasurer and paper money system does not seem to find tile houses also issue promissory notes not payable generally for 10 to 40 days. These notes are risky, according to the length of time before they fall due. The writer of the best unite is silver by weight. The import- note says that the greatest risk is incurred other firms, issuing cash notes in their name. It often happens that, when such cash notes fall due they are not even then paid in hard each but in cash no'es on somebody else. men have been growing richer. More silver them again verified.
